THE SHOW, THE ART FORMS AND INFO TO KNOW

What's the Show About?

Spinning circles around the competition, 360 ALLSTARS showcases a dream team of sensational champs in a supercharged physical performance celebrating street culture! The international hit is back at the New Victory to commemorate its 10th anniversary with world record-holding athletes and artists showing off their mad skills in freestyle basketball, BMX biking, breakdancing, acrobatics and more. Experience the thrill of extreme sports backed by a pulse-pumping, live-looped soundtrack, and featuring feats that will spike your adrenaline and have you rooting for overtime.

Breakdancing

This is a style of dance that is a cornerstone to hip-hop. Often mixing super-quick footwork with spins, acrobatics, freezes and floorwork, breakdance, or breaking as it is often called, highlights a performer's unique and skillful dance moves. Breakdancing is typically performed in a cypher, or an open circle where people take turns jamming in the middle.

The Loop Pedal

The loop pedal is a digital recording device that musicians can use to manipulate and control sounds. It enables recorded sounds to be repeated (looped) and allows recorded sounds to be laid over each other (overdubbed).

BMX

Also known as Bicycle Motocross, BMX refers to the racing, sport and stunt riding of bicycles. Within Freestyle BMX, there are various disciplines and styles. The style featured in 360 ALLSTARS is called Flatland. In Flatland, tricks are performed on smooth, flat surfaces (such as a stage), and consist of spinning and balancing in a variety of ways.

Freestyle Basketball

Freestyle basketball is an artistic interpretation of basketball handling that consists of tricks, drills and moves that incorporate rhythm, dance and awe. This sport/art form has grown rapidly over the past ten years and now incorporates elements from soccer, break dancing, juggling, popping, locking, martial arts and more.

What do your students already know?

Ask your students questions to find out how much they already know about the art forms and themes of the show. Some questions to start with are:

How do you show off your talents and skills?

Have you ever seen street art? What might street art look like on a stage?

What does the term "all star" mean to you? Do you have any all stars in your life?

CONTEXT TO CONSIDER

Onyx Productions has fast established itself as a leading Australian production house, with a portfolio of multi-disciplinary contemporary works. Founded in 2011 by producer and performer Gene Peterson, Onyx Productions has achieved significant success both nationally and internationally. To date, the company has delivered over 2500 performances across more than 50 tours to over 1 million people worldwide, including sold-out seasons on Broadway, in Edinburgh, Scotland, and at the Sydney Opera House in Sydney, Australia.

Fifty Years of Hip-Hop

As an art form, hip-hop encompasses four major elements: breakdancing, MCing (rapping/spoken word), DJing (spinning records on a turntable) and graffiti art; however, the spirit of hip-hop expands beyond these elements. Hip-hop is an expression, culture and protest used to instigate change against the norm and unite communities. Born in the South Bronx in the 1970s, hip-hop was created by Black and Latinx communities that were facing economic hardship and prejudice. At the time, hip-hop was used not only as an outlet of self-expression but also to call out systemic racism and injustice. Its existence fueled change and disruption to the status quo, as well as being a source of racial pride, style and liberation.

In the fifty years since hip-hop was born, this cultural movement has reached communities not only across America, but across the world. Following the mainstream success of rappers like Kurtis Blow and movies like Wild Style, hip-hop began to spread to other areas of the United States, notably Los Angeles and Atlanta. Now, hip-hop can be found in almost every country across the globe. From artists like Obrafour in Ghana to groups like DAM in Palestine, hip-hop and rap appeals to many marginalized communities as an outlet for social and political commentary. The globalization of hip-hop has created many variants and subgenres of the genre, each with its own way of uplifting its community and celebrating identity.

Appropriation vs. Appreciation

When celebrating an art form, fashion or tradition, it's important to understand the difference between appreciating another culture and appropriating it. Cultural appropriation is when a majority group co-opts or adopts something from another culture (this could be language, style, aesthetics, art) in a way that denigrates or harms the original culture. While culture is meant to be experienced by others, commandeering something from another culture without understanding and honoring the context of where something comes from can be hurtful and offensive. In the case of hip-hop, performers and fans alike can help appreciate the art form, as opposed to appropriating it, by respecting and uplifting the Black and Latinx communities that began and continued the movement. Engaging with different traditions and art can be beautiful, but must always be done with understanding, thought and sincerity.

HIP-HOP ICONS

Fifty years ago, most hip-hop was underground, living in street corners and block parties in the Bronx. Originators of hip-hop culture championed techniques like breakdancing, rapping, beatboxing and MCing, bringing them into the public eye and inspiring future generations. Read below about iconic figures in hip-hop who paved the way for artists today.

Rock Steady Crew

Founded by Puerto Rican B-Boy Jojo, the Rock Steady Crew is one of the most iconic and influential breakdancing groups of all time. Pioneers of headspins, back spins, headflips and headstands, the crew kept B-Boying alive in the New York club scene with fierce battles and acrobatics. One of the members, Baby Love, was the first B-Girl ever to gain national fame, and four crew members performed in the movie Flashdance.

Doug E. Fresh

One of the first artists to bring beatboxing into mainstream culture was Doug E. Fresh, often referred to as the Original Human Beatbox. Born in Harlem, Fresh gained popularity in the early 1980s through his appearance in the hip-hop movie Beat Street and early collaborations with rapper Slick Rick. Fresh is known for both his catchy raps and beatboxing abilities, and his single "La Di Da Di" has been sampled by over 1000 artists.

Darryl "Cornbread" McCray

Darryl McCray, otherwise known as Cornbread, is the father of modern graffiti art. First tagging his name in 1965 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Cornbread tagged his name anywhere and everywhere. His tags popularized graffiti and made it recognized as art instead of vandalism. Once, after a newspaper incorrectly reported that McCray had passed away, Cornbread spray painted an elephant at the Philadelphia Zoo with the line "CORNBREAD lives."

UNIT PLAN BRAINSTORM

Hip-Hop Hooray! (Social Studies, Music, Theater)

It's hip-hop's fiftieth birthday! Celebrate this huge cultural milestone by teaching your class what hip-hop is and where it came from. With your class, research the Black communities that started the cultural movement, what it stood for and why it was born. After talking about the history of hip-hop in the classroom, have your students observe and appreciate where they may see hip-hop in the world around them. Maybe this is a rap song they listen to with their friends, graffiti they see on their way to school or breakdancing they see on television. After a week, reconvene to engage in a discussion about where hip-hop lives and how it may have evolved over time. Some questions to get you started are: What is the subject matter of hip-hop today? Who is creating this art? Is it similar or different to hip-hop made fifty years ago? Why or why not? Then, have your students pick one aspect of hip-hop they saw in their communities (graffiti, rap, DJing, etc.) and research a famous hip-hop artist who engaged in that art form. In their research, have them create a presentation that honors the artist and their work. As a bonus, invite students to create or perform a bit of hip-hop inspired by their chosen artist! Finally, have everyone share their presentation with the class to honor the past fifty years of hip-hop tradition and artmaking.

To support this unit, use the My Pride Rap Creativity Page in the Respond and Connect section.

Gym Jam (Physical Education, Dance)

Dance isn't just an art form—it can also be a workout! Use the basics of dance and acrobatics to get your class moving and energized in a lesson in physical education. Begin by teaching your class a few basic movements, such as a grapevine, a pivot, a spin or a jump. Write down these terms as you explore each movement to create a “movement vocabulary bank” for the whole class to reference. Then, you can add to this word bank by sourcing different dance movements from your students. These can be silly, like the running man; pedestrian, like running in place; or more technical, like toprock. After you have created a vocabulary of movements, split your class into small groups and assign each group a song. Have each group choreograph a combination to their song using the movement bank as inspiration. When you reconvene, ask each group to teach their dance moves to the rest of the class. Then, turn each dance into a workout by having your students repeat movements, speed up or slow down, do it in pairs or even try to do it backwards! Throughout the rest of the year, use your students' dances as a way to start the day and warm up your bodies, or to get your blood flowing after sitting down for a lesson. Once everyone has the moves down, perform your dance workout for another class!

To support this unit, use the The Way You Move Activity in the Respond and Connect section.

*For clarification on these steps or to find more moves to inspire your class's movement, Youtube channels like Howcast provide a wide array of dance tutorial videos.

Circusology (Science, Theater)

While it may seem that skills like BMX biking, juggling and breakdancing are superhuman, all of these stunts are made possible by the laws of physics! Let the tricks of an urban circus inspire a research project about physics and how it can relate to the motion of a performer. Start by introducing your class to a few fundamental concepts of physics like gravity, velocity, inertia and centripetal force. Over the course of a week, have your students research one essential law surrounding one of these concepts. They can investigate what their law is, how it was discovered, how it functions and how it applies to the real world. Once they've completed their research, have each student demonstrate their chosen physics concept to the rest of the class using only classroom objects. After everyone has presented and gained a basic understanding of the laws of physics, choose a video together of an urban circus stunt or breakdancing trick. As a class, break down how science makes this feat possible and how what they've learned applies to the performance. If possible, your class can even try to replicate the trick in your classroom (safely, of course)!

To support this unit, use the Doin' the Newton Dance Activity in the Discover and Create section.

Discover and Create

In this section are ready-to-facilitate activities and kid-centered creativity pages which provide opportunities to delve a bit deeper into the themes and artistry of the show!

Doin' the Newton Dance

Use the activity below to explore the connection between science and art.

Materials Needed: One small object per student

1. To begin, offer students the following context: "The famous scientist Sir Isaac Newton authored a set of laws centered on the relation between an object and motion. In fact, Newton's first law of motion says 'objects at rest stay at rest unless a force acts on them.'
2. Next, tell them they're going to explore a blend of science and art—specifically dance. To start the exploration, ask students to find a small object, such as a ball or toy, and then find a partner.
3. First, ask students to hold their object in their hand and do the following:
4. Next, invite students to create a short sequence of four movements inspired by the motion of their objects. Then, invite them to share their moves with their partner.
5. Ask students to combine their moves and their partner's moves to create a dance. Ask them to consider this question: How do your dance moves reflect Newton's law?
6. Finally, invite volunteers to step into the spotlight by sharing their dance moves with the class and celebrate the fusion of science and dance!

→ Toss it gently in the air, catching it when it comes down. Ask them: What happens when you toss it gently upward? How does the object move? and invite them to share their responses with their partners.

→ Give their object a spin on a solid surface. Do this a few times at different speeds. Ask them: In what different ways did the object move at varying speeds? How did it act when coming to a stop? How would you describe its movement? and invite them to have a discussion in pairs about the different ways their objects move.

Reflection Questions:

How did your object's movements reflect Newton's laws?

What surprised you during the dance exploration?

How can you apply the science of motion to improve your dance moves in the future?

A Fair Trade

Have you ever interacted with trading cards, like character cards or baseball cards? Well, it's time to create your own mini-pack of them! The theme of these cards? All stars! Who in your world do you think is an all star and why? Take time to think about your trading cards' unique tricked-out look! Then, using the outlines below, draw one all star on each card and design the card to showcase your all stars' unique talents and abilities! Once your cards are created, cut them out and share them with your fellow classmates. Talk about why you picked your all stars and trade cards with your classmates who have all stars you admire.

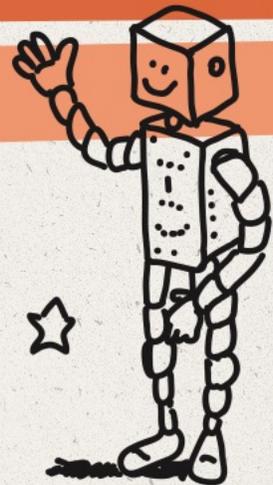

Four large, rounded rectangular boxes with dashed borders, arranged in a 2x2 grid, intended for drawing trading cards.

Etiquette

NO-HUSH ZONE: OOHS, AAHS AND APPLAUSE

Thank you for being our partner and making the performing arts a priority for your students! New Victory prides itself on presenting performing arts that make kids (and adults) exclaim, dance, scream, laugh and giggle! We love when kids vocally and physically respond to what they're seeing on stage. In fact, many of the visiting artists tell us that their favorite part of performing at the New Victory is the real-time, honest reactions from the kids in the audience. Therefore, we ask you and your fellow teachers to help us by making the New Victory a "no-hush zone." Of course, we ask for your help in managing respectful behavior to avoid distractions that are not directly related to the action on stage. Additionally, please ensure that you, your colleagues and students follow the directions of the NEW VICTORY Ushers and other theater guidelines such as no electronic devices or eating and drinking in the theater.

Respond and Connect

The activities and creativity pages invite young people to reflect on the experience of seeing a live show (if applicable), and provide opportunities to make connections to themselves, each other and the world around them.

Reflection

Engage in a conversation with your students to help them process their thoughts and feelings about the show. On a large piece of chart paper, draw the outline of a person. On the outside of the outline, have students write or draw their favorite moments from the show. On the inside of the outline, have students write or draw their own feelings about the show and what emotions they felt during the show. Then, use some of the questions below to lead students in a discussion:

What unique skills did each performer have?

What were your favorite parts of the show?

How did the show make you feel?

Teacher Tip

Engaging in dialogue, asking questions and recalling observations are skills that we believe should be fostered and encouraged. When leading a performance reflection discussion, try the following model of critical response:

Describe (I noticed...)

Analyze (I wonder...)

Interpret (I think/feel...)

Evaluate (I believe...)

THE WAY YOU MOVE

Use the activity below to get students thinking about the different ways they can move!

Materials Needed: Found objects in your classroom, masking tape, music

1. To begin, set up desks, chairs and other similar items in an interesting way to create an obstacle course in the classroom. If possible, there should be at least 8 to 10 feet between each object.
2. Next, tape arrows on the floor that clearly mark the direction of the obstacle course.
3. Walk students through the course and encourage them to safely explore the following with the objects:
  - Going around
  - Leaping over
  - Ducking under objects
4. Play some interesting music and, one by one, a few steps behind the person in front of them, challenge students to walk through the course to the music, choosing how to get past each object.
5. Change the music and have your students explore the course again, but this time encourage everyone to change the way they travel. They can:
  - Skip
  - Go in slow motion
  - Gallop
  - Combine all of the above
  - Generate ideas as a group about other ways to move and dance through the course
6. As a final challenge, remove the objects and invite volunteers to show off their dance without the obstacles!

Reflection Questions:

*Do you think what we did today was dancing?
Why or why not?*

What would be the name of these new dance moves?

What other kinds of dances could be inspired by this activity?

My Pride Rap

Think back on your life thus far, or choose to focus on your lived experiences during the past year. Visualize the significant events you experienced during that time—the ones that really stand out in your memory as truly proud moments. What were they? How did they affect you? In what ways did they make you feel proud? Now, use the first space below to write about that proud memory in your own words. Then, using the six lines below, turn that pride into your very own six-line, rhyming rap song! Use the example in the lower right corner of this page as inspiration!

PRIDE RAP EXAMPLE

(Verse 1)

I'm proud of who I am, I stand tall,
No matter what, I give my all.
Unique and special, like a shining star,
I embrace myself, I've come so far.

(Chorus)

I'm proud, yes, I'm proud, you see,
Being me is the way to be!

A Land Acknowledgement

The New Victory Theater is on the island known as Mannahatta, now called Manhattan, in Lenapehoking, the homeland of the Lenape people. These lands are intertribal trade lands under the stewardship of many Nations, and New Victory acknowledges the systematic erasure of their true history.

The land of the five boroughs that make up New York City was and still is inhabited by the Lenape, Merrick, Canarsie, Rockaway and Matinecock Nations. We celebrate and pay deep respect to the Peoples of these Nations, their cultures, their communities, their elders past and present, those with us today, and all their future generations.

We recognize that seized lands are historically inhabited by people who are racialized, marginalized and displaced by those in power, and we offer this land acknowledgement as a step in reexamining our relationship to that history. We offer our gratitude to the Indigenous peoples of many the Nations who continue to act as stewards of the land, and we encourage you to learn more about these vibrant communities.
